Rome. The Forum and the House of the Vestal Virgins. Next to the Colosseum, the Forum is the most interesting ruin of Pagan Rome. Originally a market place, temples and other public buildings were erected near it, and it became the centre of civic life and the scene of aristocratic funerals, of gladiatorial combats and notable public events. Now of course it is a conglomeration of priceless fragments—statuary, columns, &c.—a mere hint of departed glories. The house was the retreat of the Virgins who kept the sacred fire burning in the Temple of Vesta.
